
Yesterday, Capt. Neil arrived here from New York, in 60 hours. He informs, that it was the general opinion there, that the Convention of that State would yet ratify the Constitution, without an adjournment. This opinion was inferred from the anti-federal party so carefully keeping off the final question, and proposing amendments more and more conceding. In short, the Opposition is composed of men of too much consideration, to vote that State out of the union; especially, as a secession of the most important part of it would be the immediate consequence.

A New York paper of Friday last contains the two following paragraphs:

"On Tuesday last, the Convention were upon the consideration of the amendments: Most of them were carried, and very little debate on any of them. The amendment for giving the President a Council in the appointment to offices, was rejected by a great majority; only 10 voted for it. Several of the Opposition, and among the rest Mr. M. Smith, voted against the amendment for requiring two thirds of Congress to concur in declaring war: However, it was carried."

"By the last night’s mail we received letters from Poughkeepsie, dated on Tuesday afternoon—one of which says, "I think by to-morrow the House must come to something decisive—it is impossible to tell what that final decision will be—I cannot even conjecture with plausibility."

Last Friday, a female stranger died at the Bell Tavern, in Danvers; and on Sunday her remains were decently interred. The circumstances relative to this woman are such as excite curiosity, and interest our feelings. She was brought to the Bell in a chaise, from Watertown, as the said, by a young man whom she had engaged for that purpose. After she had alighted, and taken a trunk with her into the house, the chaise immediately drove off. She remained at this inn till her death, in expectation of the arrival of her husband, whom she expected to come for her, and appeared anxious at his delay. She was averse to being interrogated concerning herself or connexions; and kept much retired to her chamber, employed in needle-work, writing, &c. She said, however, that she came from Westfield, in Connecticut; that her parents lived in that State; that she had been married only a few months; and, that her husband's name was Thomas Walker;—but always carefully concealed her family name. Her linen was all marked E. W. About a fortnight before her death, she was brought to bed of a lifeless child. When those who attended her apprehended her fate, they asked her, whether she did not wish to see her friends: She answered, that she was very desirous of seeing them. It was proposed that she should send for them; to which she objected, hoping in a short time to be able to go to them. From what she said, and from other circumstances, it appeared probable to those who attended her, that she belonged to some country town in Connecticut: Her conversation, her writings and her manners, bespoke the advantage of a respectable family & good education. Her person was agreeable; her deportment, amiable & engaging; and, though in a state of anxiety and suspense, she preserved a cheerfulness, which seemed to be not the effect of insensibility, but of a firm and patient temper. She was supposed to be about 35 years old. Copies of letters, of her writing, dated at Hartford, Springfield, and other places, were left among her things.—This account is given by the family in which she resided; and it is hoped the publication of it will be a means of ascertaining her friends of her fate.

From Providence we learn, that the actress, Mrs. G. L. Whiting, of this city, had been married on Monday last, by a Judge from New York, and that the couple had been called to the altar by a clergyman from the same city. The bride was a sister of the late Mr. Whiting, who was very well known in the theatrical world.
