Bowdoin Marine Corps Society Fund

Bowdoin alumni have a proud history of service in the United States Marine Corps including during World War II, when Andrew Haldane ’41 and Everett Pope ’41 fought on Guadalcanal and Peleliu in the war’s Pacific Theater. Gordon Linke ’50 served as a Marine captain during the Korean War, and Jack Abbott ’63 enlisted in the Marines from 1962 to 1965, putting off his graduation until 1966. More recently, Gil Barndollar ’04 was commissioned in 2009 and currently serves as a Marine Corps captain. Abbott, Linke, Barndollar, and his father, Stephen Barndollar ’63, are establishing the Bowdoin Marine Corps Society Fund. The fund will provide scholarship aid to students who have honorably served in the US Marine Corps or are the children of those who have served, and also connects alumni who are former Marines or currently serving.

Transformative Gift to Establish Roux Center for the Environment

President Rose recently announced an extraordinary gift of $10 million from David and Barbara Roux ’14, which will spearhead a new center for study of the environment at Bowdoin. The new building at College Street and Harpswell Road will house faculty offices, classrooms, and research space across several disciplines related to the environment. The center will be a hub for environmental study, teaching, and collaboration at Bowdoin, and a national and worldwide resource for scholarship in the field.

Barbara and David Roux’s connections to Bowdoin run deep: graduates include their daughter, Margot ’14, and David’s father, brother, and sister. David’s mother took classes at the College as well, and he is currently a member of the Board of Trustees.

Cali Tran ’97 and Ellen Chan ’97
From the summer before starting at Bowdoin and over the next three summers, I worked as a milkman earning $195 a week, which meant in 1971 I could earn enough working in a blue-collar summer job to fund almost half my college expenses for the year. Bowdoin funded much of the rest through financial aid, for which I was and remain forever grateful.

It’s obvious how much more challenging it must be today for most students and their families to fund a college education. More than ever, Bowdoin’s strong financial aid program is a mission-critical necessity if the College is to continue to serve the common good and attract talented students from diverse backgrounds.

—Joe McDevitt ’75

I trace the beginning of my life back to a movement—my father’s escape from Tibet, when he and many other Tibetans tread across the Himalayas into Nepal, where they became part of and helped contribute to a vibrant and resilient Tibetan-exile community in Kathmandu, a place where I grew up and called home for nine years. Language allows me to perform my own interventions in this familial and collective history, in my family’s movement from Tibet to New York, in our layered marginalization, and in the larger politics of belonging. While my Bowdoin education and experience with upward mobility has caused a rupture with these roots, this distance can in itself be transformative and liberating. . . . Bowdoin will soon be part of this network of roots, anchoring forces that both ground me and open up new possibilities and imagination.

—Tenzin Tsagong ’16

Where else in our society today can you have such a direct and immediate impact on the lives of talented and amazing young people who will transform our world? For that, we thank you.”

—President Clayton Rose
