In 1969, when I was a junior at Bowdoin, I took my first photography course with Professor John McKee in a classroom in the basement of the Walker Art Museum. Discovering this medium with McKee’s insightful teaching made me aspire to be an artist on the spot. More than forty-five years later, under the roof of the same museum, I made a camera obscura photograph showing the college quad projected on an inside wall of the rotunda. For me this picture is an invitation to the entire campus to the promise and pleasures of art, and to this museum that welcomed me with open arms so many years ago.

ABELARDO MORELL, ’71, H’97

ON 52ND STREET:
THE JAZZ PHOTOGRAPHY OF WILLIAM P. GOTTLIEB
July 10—September 14, 2014

“Billie Holiday’s unmistakably seductive voice singing ‘Fine and Mellow’ lures the listener into the Museum’s second floor Shaw Ruddock Gallery. Stepping into the installation On 52nd Street: The Jazz Photography of William P. Gottlieb is like entering a time capsule into the 1940’s, when 52nd Street’s ‘Swing Alley’ in New York City was the epicenter of jazz, and William P. Gottlieb (1917–2006) was its passionate chronicler. The exhibit is a compact, deeply satisfying gem.”

WEAVING THE MYTH OF PSYCHE:
BAROQUE TAPESTRIES FROM THE WADSWORTH ATHENEUM
September 27, 2014—March 8, 2015

“Hendrick Goltzius: Mythology and Truth
September 27, 2014–March 1, 2015

“Goltzius’ images have a technical sizzle that makes them fascinating to both connoisseurs of Old Master prints and contemporary audiences with our focus on the here-and-now object qualities of art.... In the next room, the suite of tapestries illustrating Apuleius’ story of Cupid and Psyche, made after designs by the great Pieter Coecke van Aelst, provide the affluent bookend to Goltzius’ paper prints.”

"Love your museum – curated beautifully!"

Museum comment book, August, 2014
One of the reasons I’m so really thrilled to be here is that most mathematicians, not all, do not understand what I’m doing, nor do critics. They think it’s beautiful work they’re looking at and that’s not interesting to me. I’m interested in finding out about how the universe ticks, and I’m getting there my way.”

“A Mind of Winter: Photographs by Abelardo Morell

May 5 – September 27, 2015

Morell isn’t trying to transport us to winter; instead, he presents us with an impressively successful model for attaining a mind of winter. The idea is that it could be summer, art, sunrise, the woods or anything sufficiently powerful to hold our spirit in place long enough for a self-aware spiritual experience.”

Portland Press Herald, June 2015

“The 12 large archival inkjet prints, three of them black ink on glass cliché verre, are stunning evocations of a world of snow and ice and bare trees. While the Wallace Stevens poem ‘The Snow Man,’ which inspired Morell, references ‘the sound of the land,’ these prints require the quiet of contemplation in order to behold ‘nothing that is not there and the nothing that is.’”

Past Futures: Science Fiction, Space Travel, and Postwar Art of the Americas

March 5 – June 7, 2015

“The nuanced connections between sci-fi and Latin American culture post-Cold War is sure to indulge your penchant for the weird, but it also provides a keen look into sci-fi and notions of otherness underpinning the lived experiences of artists of the Americas.”

Portland Phoenix, March 2015

“Past Futures: Science Fiction, Space Travel, and Postwar Art of the Americas, a Maine exhibition of works by artists from the Americas and a book of the same name, dazzles viewers with its variety and emotional extremes. Depictions ranging from cuddly to sinister reflect the artists’ intuitions of mankind’s destiny as the latest news about the Cold War, the rise of science and technology, and especially the space race occupied newspaper headlines.”

NIGHT VISION: NOCTURNES IN AMERICAN ART, 1860–1960
June 27, 2015—October 18, 2015

“Thanks to ambitious loans and smart selections by the show’s curator, Joachim Homann, it enriches ideas about native qualities—both realistic and visionary—in American art. Every work in the show amplifies the heart’s ambivalence about night.”

Boston Globe, July 2015

“Here’s an unusual and original organizing principle—a hundred years of night scenes by American artists from the 1860’s introduction of the electric light to the invention of the age of Sputnik .... a study of how a broad range of American artists in all media met the challenges of creating nocturnal images.”

The Museum organized more than fifty public programs, including lectures, special tours, film screenings, musical concerts, and gallery conversations. Bowdoin faculty played a role in many of these activities. Likewise, student docents and interns were actively involved in developing and leading programs. The Museum also welcomed to campus a number of leading artists, scholars, and arts professionals. The following list of visiting speakers suggests the breadth and excellence of the public programs at the Museum:
