

Default Question Block

What's your Prolific ID?

How do you feel about Democrats? (0 = coldest; 100 = warmest)

Suppose we ask a random Democrat, Joe, how he feels about Republicans, also scale of 0-100, and that Joe says: 25.

Suppose we then ask Joe a series of questions measuring his knowledge of issues that Joe agrees are relevant to how he feels about Republicans. We also ask Joe how many of the questions he thinks he knows the answer to.

Suppose Joe thinks he knows the answer to five of the questions--but actually gets fewer than five answers correct. This indicates Joe didn't understand Republicans as well as he thought he did.

Would you agree that if Joe is informed about these wrong answers, then even he should admit he probably shouldn't feel so coldly toward Republicans, and should give them a feeling score higher than 25?
